

Marcellus Midstream Conference and Exhibition Show Report

Attendees at the Marcellus Midstream 2011 conference and exhibition declared the event an outstanding networking and learning experience. “I learned so much,” enthused one participant. “We have been working in this play for a long time, but hearing about the issues from these top executives really helps us make better decisions.”

The conference included individual speakers and panels that explored topics ranging from finance, pipelines, gas processing and technology to noise control, legislation and environmental challenges.

Kicking off the conference was Pennsylvania Independent Oil and Gas Association president Louis D’Amico, who said, “Meeting the needs of Pennsylvania’s natural gas producing industry will require tremendous investment in pipeline infrastructure. No one company or small group of companies will be able to meet this need. Opportunities abound for many new entities.”

During the conference, an on-stage “fireside chat” with John Pinkerton, chairman and CEO of Range Resources Corp. and Frank Semple, MarkWest EnergyLP’s chairman, president and CEO, revealed that the quality of the wells and the size of the Marcellus fairway have “greatly exceeded” their initial expectations. Early indications are that other shales and tight sands in the Appalachian Basin could also be productive if horizontal drilling and multi-stage fracture treatments are applied, including the Utica and Upper Devonian.

Many of the delegates said they had attended the inaugural Marcellus Midstream conference in 2010, and were amazed at the growth of the play and the new information available this year, and were delighted that the conference had doubled in size.

Save the Date

As the Marcellus play continues to grow, so does the Marcellus Midstream Conference & Exhibition.

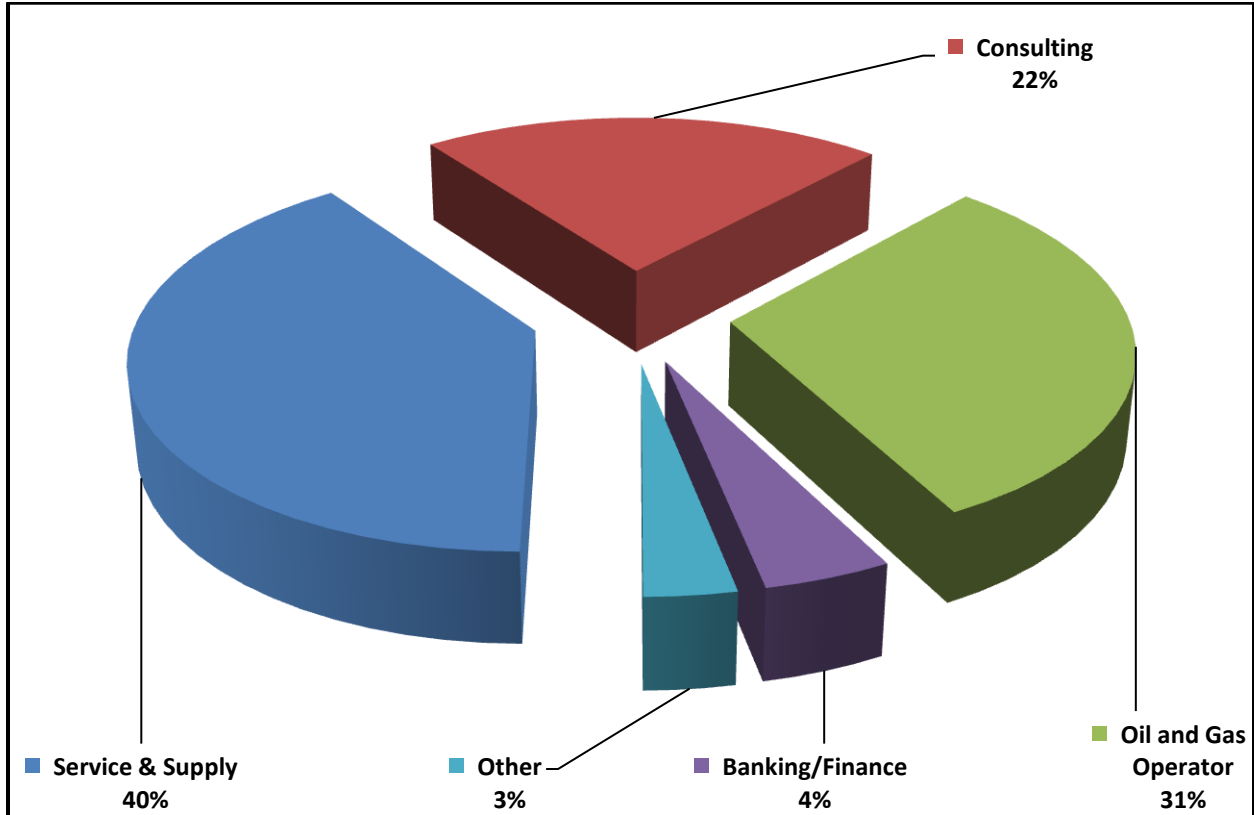

Successful ideas draw crowds. The combined two-year attendance exceeded 2,000 delegates and 150 exhibiting companies. It now stands as the largest conference and exhibition dedicated exclusively to the Marcellus Midstream shale play. As the midstream excitement continues to build, Hart Energy will always provide topical, industry-leading speakers and presentations to keep our audience informed and inspired.

On behalf of Hart Energy and Midstream Business, we thank all those who have participated in the past and we invite you back next year. Mark your calendars, the 2013 dates are March 13 – 15, at the David L. Lawrence Conference Center.
